Louis Poulsen VL 45 Radiohus Pale Rose Pendant

The VL Radiohus Pendant was originally designed in the 1940s by Vilhelm Lauritzen, who is considered one of the most significant architects in Danish history. The original design, made for Danish Broadcasting House Radiohuset, featured a brass suspension and a white shade made from three layers of mouth-blown glass. The VL 45 Radiohus Pale Rose Pendant builds upon this design, with a pale rose mouth-blown four-layer glass shade and brass suspension. As each pendant is handcrafted, the colour and thickness of the glass may vary.

The VL 45 Radiohus Pale Rose Pendant provides a uniform diffused illumination while the opening at the bottom produces downwards-directed light. The soft, pale colour of the pendant, combined with the warm, diffused glow it creates, adds an elegant softness to the room. The sleek design fits elegantly into any interior, and the downward lighting makes this pendant ideal for installation over surfaces while creating ambient lighting in the room. Perfect for use in kitchens, bedrooms, and offices, both in domestic and professional spaces. Please note that the brass is untreated, meaning if left, it will develop a unique patina over time. Alternatively, if polished occasionally, the brass will maintain its original finish.
